Rapport d'information sur les négociations internationales relatives au changement climatique (French Edition)

Le dernier rapport du Groupe d'experts intergouvernemental sur l'évolution du climat (GIEC), publié en novembre 2014, affirme que « la science montre à présent avec 95 % de certitude que depuis le milieu du XXème siècle, l'activité humaine est la cause principale du réchauffement observé. Des efforts considérables devront donc être accomplis par les pays pour améliorer leurs contributions. De plus, un point important de l'accord de Paris sera d'obtenir qu'une clause de révision soit acceptée par tous pour accroître, tous les cinq ans et avant 2020, les engagements de chacun.

L'Union européenne - au cœur du processus des négociations internationales de lutte contre le changement climatique - mais aussi les grands pays intervenants dans les négociations internationales (États-Unis, Chine, G20, G7) se sont tous positionnés, avec un degré d'ambition variable

La COP 21 sera déterminante pour la réussite de la lutte contre le changement climatique.
