As a result, they find themselves dealing with "price" issues, and wondering why the customer purchased from someone else.

- * Is your primary tool for collecting deeper and more detailed information about your customer.
- * Can make your customer think about what you want him or her to think about.
- * Is an effective tool to create the perception of your competence in your customer's mind.
- * Is your primary tool for gaining agreement from your customer.

Learn how to use the techniques that separate the superstar salespeople from the mediocre. Every aspect of your sales process will become more effective as you understand:

- * The unrecognized, ultimate power behind a good sales question.
- * How to analyze the language in a question to make sure it serves your purposes.
- * How to create better sale questions with a foolproof, step-by-step process.
