What power is available to righteous families as a result of the covenants they make? Author Wayne E. Brickey observes, "The gospel covenant is designed not only to seal families but to heal families — to wipe away tears, to close wounds, and to draw prodigal sons and daughters back home. But the covenant blesses most where it is kept the best. Most of us could do a better job of honoring it, bringing our best Family Friend into the home, and invoking the blessings of his Atonement upon the painful spots in our families." This book is a series of brief and gentle explorations of that saving covenant, inviting us to reap more fully the blessings that are needed so deeply in our families today.
